

Press Release

Contact: Rick Dearman
sales@xgipublishing.com

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
9 AM, Thursday, 08 July 2010

LOCAL PUBLISHER PUBLISHES BOOK USING ONLY FREE SOFTWARE

XGI Publications, a small independent publisher in Essex, has written, typeset and produced a book titled "Accelerated Fluency" using "opensource" free software. The company's strategy is to break the dependence on Microsoft based software and increase profits by going opensource.

The new book, a guide to learning foreign languages quickly, will be published on 2nd August. In addition to being written with open software the book gives links, hints, and tips on how to get and use free software and content to learn a language.

Rick Dearman, owner of XGI Publications said, "It is possible to run a business without ever paying for software, remaining legal and therefore increasing profits."

XGI Publications uses opensource software for email, accounting, graphics design, typesetting, online sales, distribution, and databases.

-End-